Accredited Estate Planner® Designation Council Nomination Program History

- In 2004, the NAEPC board created the council nomination program in recognition of the fact that as council leaders you are in a unique position to know who in your council may be interested in the designation and qualified for a council nomination
- Accomplished by a Council Nomination Resolution signed by the current council president and one additional council officer, the council nomination process offers the candidate a more streamlined application process with a reduced application fee
- At the same time, the council benefits from the fact that membership in the council is required in order to maintain the designation in active status and good standing
- Your council's participation affirms the core value that brings all members of the NAEPC together – excellence in estate planning!

Accredited Estate Planner[®] Council Nomination Program – How it differs from self-nomination

- Streamlined application process
- Council Nomination Resolution stands in for otherwise required 3 professional references
- Application fee is reduced by 50%
- Minimum experience requirement is 10 years actively engaged in estate planning
- Graduate coursework is not required for council nominees
